Missile Probers Quiz CIA Chief

By the Associated Press

Intelligence Chief Allen Dulles talked behind closed doors for two and a half hours today to senators investigating America's air power.

Senator Symington, Democrat of Missouri, chairman of the group, told reporters afterward:

"All I can say is that in general I am impressed with a great deal more information than I had before. He gave us the most classified testimony we have yet received."

Senator Symington refused to answer questions on such points as whether Mr. Dulles briefed the Armed Services Subcommittee on medium-range ballistic missiles—a hot point in the controversy over whether the United States is losing air supremacy to Russia.

Senator Symington said the subcommittee will meet again in open session at 10 a.m. Friday. He said witnesses will be Admiral Robert Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. Carl Spaatz, former Air Force chief and now a columnist on aviation matters.

The Missourian said Mr. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, will return to a closed-door session on Monday morning to resume his testimony.

The Senator said Mr. Dulles will review what he told the subcommittee today and decide how much, if any, can be made public. The Pentagon has assigned Vice Admiral Arthur C. Davis to go over the closed-door testimony by Defense Department witnesses.
